

To Whom This May Concern,

The decision to override translated stations will have a negative effect on many radio stations that millions of people love. One such station is KLOVE, which is a national positive music, Christian station.

In an age when many radio stations blast profanity, hatred, and negativity, KLOVE is going 'against the mainstream,' and impacting the community and the nation in a positive way. And this is sorely needed at this time of division, school murders, child abductions, and the like. Scientific studies have shown the effect of media on people's behavior. Keeping stations like KLOVE will result in more loving, positive, encouraging communities. It is in the country's best interest to keep these stations, else pay the consequences. Yes, there are documented cases of people choosing love and life due to listening to a KLOVE song. Just this month, a woman was about to commit suicide, but heard the song, "Mercy Said No," on KLOVE, and decided against the suicide! I myself know the effect of this positive Christian music, as it led me to a decision to give up pornography 10 years ago. Had this decision not happened, who knows where I would be now?

I urge you to reconsider this decision to override translators. This is unfair to the translated stations, which 'were there first,' and, as indicated above, will have a negative impact on the community.

Respectfully,
Joe Dalfonso
